ART AND CHARITY

Several weeks ago our colleague Rabbi Isserman wrote a timely editorial on the subject of unregulated solicitations for funds by outsiders for causes of uncertain claim.

We do not desire to trespass on our colleague's field. We do wish though that he would come back to this topic and hammer away at it until some action is taken by conscientious spirits in the community. A regulating instrument is needed to protect soft hearted citizens afflicted with misguided generosity against assaults on their good natures.

Were the machinery for which Rabbi Isserman is pleading, in existence, we should have been spared the depressing spectacle of a collection plate being rattled on behalf of a couple of talented Jewish artists who were billed for a performance in a local theatre.

The artists in question are undoubtedly highly gifted. Their types of performance perhaps also have a measure of propagandist value for the cause of projecting Jewish art. They deserve appreciation and support. But was it in good taste for the Jewish women to go around, as they did, begging for special donations for these artists to help them in their poverty? The peculiar feature of this bit of exercise in nobility is that very few of these zealous art enthusiasts were sufficiently interested in Jewish art to attend the first performance of the same artists which was held here several months ago. Strangely, too, this eruption of sympathy for the exponents of Jewish art occurred before the second performance, that is, before most of the generous patronesses even had a chance to find out for themselves whether the artists and their art were worth while or not.

Art is an important influence in life. Those who appreciate higher values will pay due regard to the ennobling function of art. But it is degrading art to treat it as an object of charity—to call into play motives for its support which are applicable to the sphere of philanthropy. Artists are inspired people. They contribute a note of beauty in the accord of life which calls forth an experience of expansiveness and amplification of the spirit. They should be treated with delicacy and deference. Compensation given to them should not be regarded as largess handed out by the affluent to the underprivileged.

No doubt the good folks who went around collecting money for a couple of poor people from New York who were coming here to perform as artists were inspired by a laudable impulse—the kind of impulse which sustains them in their other communal endeavours. But they might have gone about the matter with more tact and finesse. They might have waited until after the appearance of the artists; until after they were inspired by the magic of the art; and thrown into a fit of ecstatic appreciation. Then while riding on the crest of emotion they might have gathered a band of enthusiasts and contrived to tender their offerings on the altar of art.

It is with regret that we present the facts of this case before the public. Our hope is that in the future charitably disposed souls will attempt to differentiate between art and charity.

WEARING THE HAT IN THE SYNAGOGUE IS CHUKKATH HAGOY

Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

The most acrid argument propounded by the champions of orthodox Judaism against liberal Judaism is that the liberal Jew has altered the traditions of his faith to follow the customs of his neighbours (Chukkath Hagoy), that the changes liberal Judaism has effected in the prayer-book, in mode of worship, were due to the desire of the liberal Jew to imitate the non-Jew. After all there is nothing objectionable in adopting a good and worthy custom of a neighbour. On the contrary, it is the part of wisdom to do so. If the use of an organ can add beauty to a religious service, why should the synagogue ban the organ. There is nothing of Christian theology, which is unacceptable in an organ. And the liberal Jew has introduced the organ not because it would make the synagogue service somewhat like the church service, but because the organ has but an added dignity to the atmosphere of worship. The motive for the introduction of the organ has been utilitarian and not imitative.

In adopting a fine custom of our neighbor, the liberal Jew not only used common sense, but he even followed traditional Jewish precedents, for very frequently the Jew has adopted Chukkath Hagoy to beautify his ceremonial worship. Even King Solomon sent to the Phoenicians for artisans that he might utilize their artistry in his temple. But a short while ago, when the Holy Blossom Synagogue passed a law making the wearing of hats optional with the worshipper at certain services, the hue and cry was raised that worship hatless was but slavish imitation. Now for our thunderbolt. In a scholarly treatise, which was read at the last meeting of the Central Conference of American rabbis, Prof. Jacob Z. Lauterbach of the Hebrew Union College, noted Talmudic authority, discussed the subject "Should One Cover the Head when Participating in Divine Worship?" In his reply, which is buttressed by Talmudic, and Midrashic quotations as well as by copious references to rabbinical opinion, Professor Lauterbach points out that not only is the practice of covering the head in the synagogue or while reciting prayers, not only not supported by any express statement in the Talmud, but many contrary statements are found. The custom of wearing the hat at worship was a Chukkah Hagoy, a custom of the Gentile, adopted by the Jews of Babylon and Spain from their non-Jewish neighbours, and later on adopted by Jews in other lands. If the charge of Chukkath Hagoy is to influence Jewish religious opinion, then the Jew to avoid that charge and to be consistent must cease to worship with his hat on. Dr. Lauterbach's article is found in the thirty-eighth volume of the proceedings of the Central conference of American Rabbis. We shall be glad to furnish reprints of that article gratis on request through the office of the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW. We are glad also to point out the fine appreciation of another point of view in Lauterbach's article. We quote from the article:

"The practice of covering the head when entering a synagog, and when reciting prayers or performing any other religious ceremony, is not based upon any talmudic law and cannot be supported by any express statement in the Talmud. Many express statements and implied teachings of the Talmud rather point to the contrary. This practice is merely a custom, Minhag, that first appeared among the Jews in Babylon. In the course of time it spread to other countries and gradually became a generally observed custom among Orthodox Jews. Its origin probably goes

Money Needed for Fresh Air Camp

The Jewish Laurentian Fresh Air Camp is collecting toward an objective of $25,000, for a permanent summer rest home in the Laurentian Mountains for women and young children. Last summer, the Family Welfare Department of Federation appealed to the Jewish Laurentian Fresh Air Camp and at the temporary summer site at St. Jerome, 21 sick men, 40 women, 51 young children and 8 unmarried women, all of them recommended by Federation, were given holidays. This summer the Jewish Laurentian Fresh Air Camp expects to "buy health and sunshine" for 700 women and young children. Contributions are received by Mrs. Samuel Leopold, President. Three sent in already: J. & S. Kellert, $200; Jacob Stewart, McDougall & Cowans, H. Rabinovitch, S. Leopold, Joseph Cohen, K.C., Michael Margolick, $100 each; Jacob Latt, Peter Bercovitch, Glickman & Glickman, J. Kushner, H. Robinson, $50 each; I. C. Davis Goodman, architect, has planned a building which will contain accommodation for over 150 women and young children at a time. With five parties each summer, over 700 women will benefit by a summer vacation. Because it is often impossible for a poor woman to leave her very young children, there will be special accommodation for young babies with special workers to care for them. The house will be equipped with airy sleeping rooms, large dining and recreation rooms, modern kitchen, wash rooms, etc.

Mrs. Samuel Leopold, president of the Jewish Laurentian Fresh Air Camp, with Mrs. Joe Cohen, head of the finance committee were in charge of these team captains for the drive: Mesdames P. Mollie Messenger and Goldie Cowtan, students of the Handy Arts School, in charge of the Jade Art Shop, a charming place where delightful lamp shades are designed and created to suit any scheme of decoration, or any colour effect. Rare silks, crushed transparent velvets, velour georgettes and crushy taffetas are hand dyed in batik and crackled effects. Particularly lovely floral, or gaily bizarre designs, hand dyed to harmonize with the shades. Novel three lamps produce a soft light. Portuguese velours and egg shell parchments are developed into artistic shades. A feature of the Jade Art Shop is the type pleated shade that is created to match any type of vase, and for the small table lights.

Cushions may be seen in every Moorish chenille, appliqued with Persian flowers of batiks, transparent velvets, and of leather velvets; a number of gift suggestions include card coverings, luncheon cloths, mirrors, vases and all sorts of gifts. Original shadowgraphs, painted Moorish designs for sale. Dresses for children and grown ups for sports costumes, party dresses, negligees, evening wraps, batik scarves, artificial rose vine vases, pillow cases and vanity cases, and many more gifts.

Orders are taken for specially designed shades, lamps, batik dresses and other articles. The Jade Art Shop is a charming place to visit, its managers will help you to get the right things for your home.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Addressing the Business Men's Council of Federation at their fifth annual dinner meeting at the Montefiore Club Monday night, Nathan Gordon, K.C., stressed the ideals of charity commonly held in the past and traced the various stages of growth in communal endeavor. He dealt with the acceptance in modern times of the view that preventative work in social service is more necessary than the negative notion of giving to alleviate suffering.

According to the report submitted by the retiring chairman, Issachar Greenberg, the drive held last fall resulted in a surplus of $22,835 over the $250,000 objective. Clarence Mirhasis was elected chairman of the Council, and J. P. Lewis and H. Bronfman were chosen as first and second president respectively.

The following were elected honorary members of the Business Men's Council: Edgar M. Berliner, Michael Hirsch, A. H. Jacoby, Sol Kellert, Leon H. Fischel, David Kirsch, Al Lesser, J. Levinson, sr., Harry Rothier, and Michael Morris. Nominations for the executive board included Martin Simon, I. Rosenbloom, H. Greenberg, M. Singer, T. Garfinkle, J. N. Neumann, L. M. Fingard, D. Shapiro, J. Lewinson, J. Schaffran, H. G. Rendon, I. Berman, A. Saul Cohen, I. M. Rubinovitch, H. M. Rigelsky, S. B. Albert, Al Ragonsky, A. Kallner, I. Smith, F. H. Lavin, M. Takefman, L. Fletcher, J. Albert, George Isaenman, Ben Tapse, M. Goldenberg, William Singer, M. G. Kirsch, Aaron A. Schachter, Arthur Levin, Paul Silverstein, C. B. Palmer, George Hollinger, A. Chartrand, H. J. Levinson, Phil Meyerovitch, I. Markman, G. Reinhart, Dr. M. H. Tober, Dr. C. I. Finderson, Dr. F. A. Greenspun, B. Rosdin, E. Lazare, Max Seigler, J. Gillett, and H. C. Shaffer.

An Ounce of Prevention is Good

But a Ton is Better

In fact an ounce of prevention is merely a matter of being sure you always have at least a ton of Hand & Parker coal in the bin.

Then when an unexpected cold wave sweeps down during the night you can face the morning with a smile. As the day wears on and delivery service is taxed to capacity and ice and snow cover the streets, trains and cars you have no worries for you know that your family is snug and warm with plenty of fuel on hand.

KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Motoring through a blinding snow-storm today on his way to New York City, where he was to attend a wedding, Paul Segal, 22, of 616 Jeanne Mance avenue, Montreal, was fatally injured in an automobile accident on the Albany post road, February 2. He died a short time later in a Poughkeepsie hospital.

His fiancee, Miss May Sherman, 18 of 3872 Laval avenue, Montreal, was taken to the hospital, where she was reported unconscious and suffering from internal injuries. May Segal is his sister was cut and bruised, and was treated at the hospital but was unable to give a connected account of the accident. The story of the accident was gleaned by investigators from the girl's semi-coherent statements and from tracks in the road which were obliterated within a few moments by the driving snow. It was learned that Segal's car had skidded, jumped a ditch and crashed into a tree. At the home of Max Segal, 616 Jeanne Mance street, it was learned that Paul Segal was on his way to New York city with his father, mother, sisters and other relatives to attend the weddings of two relatives in New York over the week-end.

It was revealed that Paul Segal had died a short time after the accident, but that Miss May Sherman, the fiancee of Paul Segal's sister, was in a serious condition but there was hope of saving her life. The funeral of Paul Segal took place from his parents residence, 616 Jeanne Mance street.

Paul Segal was born and educated here. He was in the building contracting business. He is survived by his father and mother; by two brothers, Samuel and Israel, and by four sisters, Sophy, Molly, Sarah and Mary, all of Montreal.

The Canadian School of Electricity Limited, Phillips Square offers training to boys and young men that fits them to hold responsible positions at a good salary. Montreal is situated in the heart of the hydro-electrical district, so that many splendid opportunities are awaiting those trained in junior electrical engineering and electro-technician work. Courses in these subjects are given at the Canadian School of Electricity, where over 200 students are now enrolled. Of these about 75 are day pupils, the rest attending night classes, while they work during the day. As soon as they graduate, positions are found for students with firms such as Bell Telephone Co., Northern Electric Co., Montreal Canadian Consolidated, C.N.R., Pte. St. Charles, C.P.R., Aluminum Goods Manufacturing, Light, Heat and Power, etc. Some of these firms have arranged classes of their own employees who are taking instruction at the Canadian School of Electricity. COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal,
Associate Contributing Editor

I Even Disturb China

Shanghai, China, is some distance from Montreal. Little did I expect that Commentaries would even disturb people surrounded by Chinese Walls. But read the following harangue published on the editorial page of "Israel's Messenger", edited by Mr. Ezra of Shanghai.

"He is a graduate of Cincinnati. Writing in the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, of Montreal, he refers with glee to the appointment of a graduate of Isaac M. Wise's Yeshiba, Dr. Reinhardt, to the moderate reform pulpit in London. He sees in it the growth of the new brand of Judaism fostered by the College. Continuing, Mr. Stern says:—'Who can stem the tide? Even the 'Chief Rabbinate' is silent. The once famous 'attacks' emanating from its august offices are no longer to be heard. Why? They have proven futile.'

What silly twaddle' Does Mr. Stern think that the Chief Rabbi the Very Rev. Dr. J. H. Hertz, must continue day and night to arraign the 'Liberal' movement when he had so ably crushed it into atoms in his series of sermons and exposed its anti-Jewishness before 'eney kol Yisrael'? The Chief Rabbi of the British Empire was not only satisfied in his indictment of the new cult, but took the next wise step in having his brilliant discourses published in booklet form and placed before the whole Jewish world. What more was he expected to do? His voice far from being hushed is, therefore, heard everywhere and anywhere where loyal sons of Jewry meet and who think of quoting the sermons in connection with the fallacies and vagaries of "Liberal" Judaism. The discourses in question far from being futile have caused a wave of enthusiasm and urged our people to combat the dangerous movement which is eating like a canker into the vitals of Judaism. Mr. Stern must think twice in future before attempting to extol the new brand of Judaism at the expense of truth and sound judgment."

My reply is found in a news item from England that recently the Jewish community of Liverpool organized a Reform Temple. This is the first time that a liberal synagogue has been brought into existence outside the city of London. And may I quote "Mentor" of the Jewish Chronicle of London? (December 7, 1928). "It is clear that the Chief Rabbi's "New Paths" have not saved Liverpool Jewry any more than have his "Affirmations." Mr. Ben Ezra, in all honesty, will you think twice in the future before attempting to negate the liberal movement in Judaism? I ask once more—"who can stem the tide"?

The World's Debt to Israel

I spoke on the above topic before the Theological Undergraduate Society of McGill University. I pleaded with them to remember that Israel's gifts to the Temple of civilization were the choicest. Ethical Monotheism, The Decalogue, the Prophets, The Bible including both the old and New Testaments, the Talmud, the Apostles, yes and Jesus—these are fine contributions which came out of the heart and brain of Israel. I asked these embryonic ministers that when they go forth to preach to remind Christians that they are much indebted to Israel. And certainly it is high time that the Jew in turn be appreciated and not degraded. I protested against the Christlessness of Christendom, against the Christ-people- the Jews. Judging from the open forum which followed my address—the "Theologs" were in agreement with all my claims in behalf of the Jew. Good! But will they speak boldly and fearlessly in their pulpits in behalf of the Jews? I hope they will!

You will Help!

The Jewish Laurentian Fresh Air Camp Organization wants to raise twenty-five thousand dollars to enable them to erect a permanent camp in the Laurentians. It is a worthy cause and merits support. Will you help this organization in its work to bring sunshine into the lives of poor Jewish mothers and children?

It Came to Pass That——

—By Dr. Cecil Roth, of London, England, fellow of the Royal Historical Society.

MARCH 1ST.

Martyrdom at Worms, 1349. The City Council had condemned the whole of the community to be burned in consequence of the atrocious libel that they had been instrumental in introducing the Black Death. Twelve Jewish representatives repaired to the Town Hall to beg for mercy: and legend has it that on being refused they drew forth weapons which they had concealed in their garments and fell upon the Councillors, killing them all. Whether this is true or no, the Jews determined to anticipate the fate in store for them. Setting fire to their houses, they perished in the flames almost to a man, to the number of over four hundred souls.

MARCH 2ND.

Massacre at Paris, 1382. The Peasants' Revolt in England under Wat Tyler had its repercussions in France, where taxation had become insupportably severe. In Paris, the rioters (known as the Maillotins from the heavy mallets they carried) regarded the Jews as the accomplices of the tax-gatherers, which they were to some extent forced to be owing to the nature of their employment. During the first few days of March, 1482, the mob controlled Paris, and sixteen Jews and Jewesses were among their victims. The example was followed at Mantes, where the Jewish quarter was pillaged.

MARCH 3RD.

Confiscation of Hebrew Books in France, 1240. In consequence of the slanders of the apostate Nicholas Donin, Pope Gregory IX had issued instructions for all copies of the Talmud to be sequestered and an investigation made into its contents, which were reported to comprise blasphemies against the Christian religion. It was only in France, then under the rule of the devout Louis IX, that the orders were carried out: and on Saturday, March 3rd., 1240, all copies of the proscribed work were seized while the Jews were at worship in their synagogues. Two years later, after the merest parody of an enquiry, the compilation was condemned: and, in the middle of 1242, no less than twenty-four cartloads of priceless manuscripts were burned in Paris. Meir of Rothenburg, who witnessed the outrage, commemorated it in his heart-broken elegy: 'Ah, is it well, O thou consumed in fire.' This was the first episode in the attack upon the Hebrew literature, which was mourned by the Jews even more perhaps than the attempts against their bodies. Truth was great, and it prevailed: yet these outrages are responsible for the fact that the only one single manuscript codex of the whole Talmud has been preserved.

MARCH 4TH.

Deliverance of the Jews of Egypt, 1524. Ahmed Shaitan Pasha, Viceroy of Egypt, had been disappointed in his ambition of being appointed Grand Vizier to the Sultan, Suleiman the Magnificent, in Constantinople. He determined accordingly to revolt: and requested the Jewish Master of the Mint, Abraham de Castro, to substitute his name on the coinage for that of the Sultan. The latter fled away to give information of the approaching rebellion: and Ahmed Pasha determined to avenge himself upon the Jews of Egypt as a whole. Twelve prominent Jews were summoned to his palace and informed that unless they paid him the exorbitant sum of two hundred talents of silver, he would give orders for the massacre of the whole community. In their desperation, the Rabbis proclaimed a day of fasting and contrition: and all the children under twelve, whose purer souls would assuredly make their petitions more effective, were gathered together to pray in the synagogue. An offer of a large sum of money, amounting to about one-tenth of the whole sum which was demanded, was rejected with scorn. Those representative leaders of the community who brought it were thrown into irons, and it was announced that they and the rest of the Jews would be put to death as soon as the Viceroy had left his bath. But, before that could take place, a band of conspirators headed by one of his viziers took advantage of his helpless condition to attack him. He was severely wounded, and later beheaded: while his government was overthrown. In gratitude for this miraculous escape, the Jews of Cairo instituted a special feast, ever afterwards celebrated each year on 27/8 Adar.

MARCH 5TH.

Massacres in Kingdom of Navarre, 1328. The Jews had been made, as usual, the scapegoats for the unpopular French rule. On the death, therefore, of Charles the Fair, the last of the main line of the house of Capet, the mob rose against them, egged on by a fanatical Franciscan friar named Pedro Olligoyen. In the city of Estella, a massacre began on the Sabbath, March 5th., 1328. The mob, reinforced by bands from the surrounding countryside, stormed the Jewish quarter, set fire to the houses, and slew the inhabitants almost to a man. Menahem ben Zerah, afterwards famous as a Rabbinic authority and author of the Zeda la Derekh, was saved from under a heap of corpses by a friendly knight: but his parents and four brothers were all killed. Other massacres simultaneously took place at Tudela and elsewhere in the country. The new king, Philip III., began to take steps against the culprits and imposed fines upon the cities of Estella and Viana. Later, however, he released the prisoners, and remitted the levies as an act of grace. On the other hand, he confiscated to his own use, as a royal prerogative, the property which had been taken from the Jews, and imposed upon them in spite of their miserable condition a heavy coronation-tax.

MARCH 6TH.

Expulsion from Lübeck, 1816. In the days of its independence the city had shewn itself characteristically intolerant, permitting no Jews to live within its walls excepting a few schütz juden. On its annexation to France, during the Napoleonic Wars, all discrimination came to an end. The numbers of the community rapidly grew, especially in consequence of the expulsions during the siege of Hamburg. As soon as the French domination ceased, however, reaction set in. The Senate began to discuss new restrictions: the guilds demanded expulsion. The Jews, in conjunction with the communities of the other free cities, sent a representative to appear before the Congress then sitting at Vienna to champion their rights. By a verbal quibble, however, their endeavours were nullified: and on March 6th., 1816, the Senate decreed that all Jews should leave the city within four weeks. Ultimately, as a great concession, they were permitted to settle in the suburb of Moisling.

MARCH 7TH.

Massacre at Stamford, 1190. The religious fervour which had been aroused on the Continent by the crusading movement had long left Eng-

"The Rise of David Levinsky"

The
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW

announces that by special arrangement with Harper's it will soon begin to run "The Rise of David Levinsky" as a serial story. "The Rise of David Levinsky" was written by Abraham Cahan, editor of the JEWISH DAILY FORWARD of New York. It ranks as one of the great contributions made by Jewish writers to American literature. So real that it might be the genuine autobiography of a new American, this life-story of a Russian Jewish immigrant, is an impressive portrait of a human soul. It shows David Levinsky's conflict between materialism and idealism, his intellectual development, and his romantic experiences, each a study in the psychology of passion.

You will see startling pictures and hear gripping experiences in "The Rise of David Levinsky." You will never forget David's life in the Russian ghetto or how he begins his existence in New York as a hungry, lonely peddler. While making his way through college as a "seasonal" worker in a cloak and suit shop an affront by his employer changes the course of David's life -and against his own wishes he becomes the millionaire owner of a huge cloak factory. Every Jew should be fascinated by this powerful story of Abraham Cahan's. It is profound, colorful, a realistic novel of literary importance.

Watch for the first installment of this book in THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW. It will appear soon. Read it aloud. If you are not a regular subscriber to the REVIEW make sure to become one now. You will not want to miss a single installment of this appealing story, land comparatively unaffected. Its extension to this country at the beginning of the reign of Richard I. had however the inevitable consequence of outbreaks against the Jews. The example was set in London at the time of the coronation (September 3rd., 1189): and it was soon imitated elsewhere. The communities of Norwich, Lynn, Dunstable, and ultimately York all suffered, one after the other. At Stamford, there had assembled for the mid-Lent fair a number of young men who had taken the Cross and were preparing to sail for the Holy Land. 'They were indignant,' says the old chronicler naively, 'that the enemies of the cross of Christ who dwelt there should possess so much when they had not enough for the expenses of so great a journey. They considered therefore that they ought to extort from them as unjust possessions whatever they could apply to the necessary uses of the pilgrimage they had undertaken.' An attack prompted merely by a desire for booty naturally degenerated into a massacre. The majority of the Jews managed however to retire into the castle and escaped injury, though they had to abandon their property. One of the robbers who was subsequently killed for the sake of the spoil he had seized was revered by the people as a saint and martyr.

A new book of Jewish interest is "The Chosen People" (Longmans, Green and Co., $2) by Jerome and Jean Tharaud, called a brief history of the Jews in Europe. The Tharauds are non-Jewish French writers and will be remembered for "The Shadow of the Cross." This new book of theirs contains only 249 pages and is therefore brief for a book of its kind but is it history?

In the first chapter of "The Chosen People" is discussed the influence upon Jewish life of the Torah and Talmud. The Jews are described as living in suffocation under the despotism of the rabbis, ostracized in tiny quarters because the ghetto was the only place where they could live according to the Talmud. The Jew shaped his own destiny by condemning himself to traffic in gold. Then the authors say that the Church forced this isolation and traffic by closing everything else to the Jew. These contradictory statements establish the general character of the book. For the Tharauds, as they admit in the preface, have been accused of anti-Semitism.

In "The Chosen People" there is a constant effort to place blame upon the Jew for his miserable ghetto life for all the smiling attitude of impartiality attempted by the writers. When they tell you how many Jews were driven to the funeral pile they make this seem small by telling you that others were miserable too, not only the Jews. When they relate instances of terrible cruelty against the Jews they note brightly that Jews converted to Christianity were harsher towards their former co-religionists than the Christians were! It is this lack of scholarly detachment and scholarly searching after the facts that make the book distasteful to say nothing of the breezy, Sunday feature style in which it is written. "The Chosen People" was evidently thrown together in a hurry because Jews buy books about their race especially when these books are short and in type easy to read with here and there a wood cut for decoration. You have the feeling that the volume is full of sly insinuations wherever there should be doubt and that it contains colored material often instead of the truth.

The Tharauds seem to be choking down for the sake of what is polite a welling desire to throw mud on the Jew. How else account for this from writers who call themselves historians?: "There is the Jewish character itself. In it are natural defects, more or less known to everyone and the Jews are the first to admit them; faults about which they joke so readily among themselves, ironically, as a kind of pleasure, a self-revenge. They know very well that a world fashioned in their image would be disagreeable and that they would be the first to refuse to live in such a place. There are faults inborn in the race, or effected by circumstances under which they have lived, but whatever their origin, will they finally diminish and then disappear? The story of the centuries might make one a bit sceptical but it would be neither reasonable nor generous nor just to turn distrustfully from the future."[2] This nasty slam is on the last two pages of a book of history and entirely undignified and uncalled for. It justifies suspicions which come early in the reading of it. It makes you positive that the Tharauds write malicious propaganda.

The writers compose their book by writing around a number of outstanding figures in Jewish life through centuries. They are interested in dramatic aspects and mention Spinoza in a couple of paragraphs while giving pages to Gabriel da Costa. They begin with Maimonides "who believed in free reasoning and introduced the elements of Greek logic into Judaism." The book tells of how Gabriel da Costa was excommunicated, forced to repent publicly and lashed and trod upon because he "dared to protest against the dry and shrivelled Law." In passing Spinoza is mentioned as having been condemned by the synagogue and having left Amsterdam to write his "Ethics" which "strikes at the idea of a system preoccupied solely with human affairs." Sabattai Zevi, the false Messiah who first fired enthusiasm in all the ghettoes of Europe and then embraced the faith of Islam when given his choice between conversion and death is portrayed in "The Chosen People" in the cheap and tawdry magazine section which gives you Aimee Semple McPherson. Moses Mendelssohn, the German Jew, is held up as the man "who did more than any one else to transform Israel" because he was the first Jew to show that it was possible to be a good Jew and at the same time a good European. He came to Berlin, where Mendelssohn was a leader, was "the first place in the world where Christians and Jews met on an equal footing." Voltaire visited there and went back to France to write a pamphlet on Mendelssohn and the Jews and to accomplish the granting of civil rights to the Jews. Then there was Bal-chem-tov, Becht by name. He came to the Jews after hundreds of thousands had been slaughtered in Poland and Ukrania and Yeshivas had gone down and the rabbis had lost their greatness. From the Cabbala, a tradition kept in scrawl-books and made of astrology, medicine, magic, metaphysics, Becht took "the belief that by simple prayer man may influence God Himself." His religion was one of hope, joy and tenderness and his sect grew to many thousands of Chassidim. In 1860 there was Moses Hess, who in his "Rome and Jerusalem," voiced the idea of re-establishing a country for the Jews. In 1895 Dr. Theodore Herzl, affected by the Dreyfus case, realized that he was a Jew. The Tharauds say he believed as Moses Hess did "that truly the Jews formed and element incapable of assimilation by other nations. Then there was nothing left for them to do but leave relieving the nations of their unwelcome presence." With greater chutzpah the authors ask: "Are Bolshevism and Zionism the only alternatives open to the Jewish mind? Between Lenin and Herzl is there no place for any other kind of Jew?" Just imagine!

Of all Jews Charlie Chaplin will think the Tharauds have nerve. Few writers suggest any more that Chaplin is a Jew altho the Jews themselves have always claimed him. This excerpt from "The Chosen People" is the most entertaining part of it: "You know this Jew from the ghetto. You have seen him . . . in the movies. He is Charlie Chaplin. Charles Chaplin is a Jew and all the traits of his humor bear the Jewish stamp. Try to recall 'The Gold Rush,' a diverting film in itself but a most admirable one if one sees in it what is a splendid memory of the ghetto, whether Chaplin has willed it or not. It is the story of a 'schlemil.' The Schlemil in the ghetto is the awkward, unlucky fellow whose bread always falls buttered side down; the fellow about whom one says, if he is an undertaker, that men have stopped dying; or again if he is a candle monger, that night never comes . . . Charlie approaches, with his long flat feet and famous little round hat which never leaves his head (no Jew ever uncovers). He thrusts that hat on his pate with Israel's familiar gesture, centuries old. Where is he going in the snow? So feeble in appearance, so slim and fragile and supple he is the very symbol of Israel's force. What is the use of being a Jew if Jehovah is not there to take care of you? He has been hungry for centuries. He knows all the ghetto's wiles for deceiving his famished stomach. I am quite certain that it was not Charlie Chaplin who invented the way to make soup out of an old shoe or to suck nails as if they were marrow bones. Remember his way of shovelling snow, work which disgusted him, as all manual labor naturally, disgusts the Jew. The snow which he removes from before one door he piles up before another . . . The pains of others serve him. To crown everything and to finish this ghetto portrait is the marvellous ease with which he accustoms himself to his great good fortune just as he accepted his good luck. Very quickly he replaces with smartly tailored clothes the little round hat and his livery of misfortune And yet, in just a detail about his toilet, in his frock coat and top hat, he keeps his roguishness, that miraculous roguishness, the roguishness of Aaron."

So do the busy historians improve each shining hour! I.I.c.

COMMENTARIES

My Radical Friends

At the "Icor" mass meeting held last Sunday—the bolshevik minded did not like my condemnation of the Soviets for suppressing religious education in Russia. I deplored the fact that the Soviets "fear" "whites" as indicated by the fact that I had to sign a written statement before entering Russia that I would not engage in "religious propaganda." I pointed out that children in present day Russia are being taught that civilization began in 1917 with the dawn of Bolshevism. What a tragedy and human error! I also underscored the thought that as far as the Jews are concerned, they can do one of two things: (1) die or (2) till the soil. My radical friends were angry. My radical friends—even they are intolerant of the truth.

OTTAWA

Mrs. S. Brodie was elected Regent of Disraeli Chapter, I.O.D.E. at the annual meeting at her home last Thursday evening. With Mrs. Brodie on the new executive are: honorary regent, Mrs. A. J. Freeman; first vice-regent, Mrs. J. Kane; second vice-regent, Mrs. Harry Rosenes; treasurer, Mrs. M. L. Desmond; secretary, Mrs. Geo. Wolf; "Echo" secretary, Mrs. J. Herwitz and educational secretary, Mrs. A. Marcus. Refreshments were served by the hostess at a tea table decorated with spring flowers and lighted yellow tapers.

The marriage was solemnized Sunday noon, February 17th, at the home of the groom's brother, M. Cooper, 243 Rideau street, of Miss Adeline Carp and Daniel Cooper. Rev. J. Mirsky performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives. The bride was given in marriage by A. Kelman and was attended by Mrs. M. Cooper and Mrs. A. Kelman. She wore a champagne-colored georgette dress and carried roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Informal reception. Tables held flowers and lighted yellow tapers. Mrs. M. Cooper and Mrs. A. Kelman were assisted in serving by Mesdames D. Friendly, M. Flesher, A. Fireman, M. Goldberg. The couple will live in Ottawa.

Born, Sunday, February 17th, at Ottawa Civic Hospital, to Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Venik, a son.

"SMILIN' THRU" AT VICTORIA

Old favourite, in new and most beautiful setting opens at Victoria Street playhouse Monday.

Edith Taliaferro, as "Moonyeen Clare" has her most charming role of the season at the Victoria next week, commencing Monday. The play is being presented by popular request and no effort has been spared to make it the most outstanding success of the season. The old-fashioned romance, by Allen Langdon Martin, will be given new meaning at this theatre next week. Scenic effects, lighting, costumes, and cast have all been prepared with the end in view of giving theatre patrons a play that will be treasured in their memory for some time to come.

It is an old rose and lavender play, sweet and dainty. "Smilin' Thru" is an old favourite with the Toronto public and many of them will be glad of this opportunity to see the play again, at its best. James A. Dwyer, Victoria scenic artist, has "spread himself." The play lends itself to beautiful scenery and Mr. Dwyer has not been slow to take advantage of the fact. The result is a garden scene more lavish in scope and more artistic in execution than any that has yet been used for this play in Toronto.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

Rabbi Isserman's Editorial

back to a non-Jewish source. It furnishes another instance of how sometimes the Jews in one country, subject to the influence of their environment, would borrow a ceremony or custom from their non-Jewish neighbors and pass it on to Jews of other countries, and how in the course of time such a borrowed non-Jewish custom is interpreted by Jewish teachers as having some religious significance and regarded as a genuinely Jewish custom. In the following I present a brief account of the origin and the development of this supposedly Jewish custom of covering the head during religious devotion or when in a holy place."

"In summing up the discussion I would say that from the point of view of Jewish law or ritual there can be no objection to either covering or uncovering the head in the synagog or when praying and when reading the Torah. The custom of praying bareheaded or with covered head is not at all a question of law. It is merely a matter of social propriety and decorum. As such it cannot, and need not, be the same in all countries and certainly not remain the same for all times. For it depends on the ideas of the people as to what is the proper thing to wear or not to wear at solemn occasions and at public worship. These ideas are, of course, in turn subject to change in different places. Hence, in countries where the covering of the head is a sign of showing respect and reverence, it certainly would be improper to appear before God in the house of prayer with uncovered head. And even in countries where it is generally regarded more respectful to remove the hat, if there be congregations who still feel like their grandfathers and consider it disrespectful to pray with uncovered head, they are within their right if they retain the custom of their fathers. We can have no quarrel with them and should rather respect their custom. In visiting them in their synagogs or when participating in some religious service at their homes, we should do as they do. For their motive and their intentions are good, and they observe these practices out of a feeling of respect and a sense of propriety, misguided as they may appear on this point to the occidental and modern mind. On the other hand no one should find any fault with those people, who, living in countries where it is considered to be disrespectful to keep the hat on while visiting in other people's homes or in the presence of elders and superiors, deem it proper to show their respect for the synagogue by removing the hat on entering it. These people also observe their practice with the best intentions and with a respectful spirit. They are not prompted by the desire to imitate non-Jewish practice. Their motive rather is to show their respect for the synagog and to express their spirit of reverence by praying with uncovered head. And although in the last century this question of "hat on or hat off" was the subject of heated disputes between the Conservative and Liberal groups of Jewry, we should know better now, and be more tolerant and more liberal towards one another. We should realize that this matter is but a detail of custom and should not be made the issue between Orthodox and Reform. It is a detail that is not worth fighting about. It should not separate Jew from Jew and not be made the cause of breaking of Jewish groups or dividing Jewish congregations."
